The altar is one of the most important symbols of the presence of Christ in the Catholic Church. Jesus invites us to join Him in the meal that He offered to the Apostles at the Last Supper. In our Cathedral we have two altars, the altar of repose with the crucifixion scene and the altar of sacrifice where masses are celebrated.

The altar of repose was installed in 1937. In the 1987 renovation a wooden altar was installed as the altar of sacrifice. On the front of that wooden altar was a marble image of the recumbent lamb, the symbol of the eucharist. That is now on the front of the altar of repose where it originally was.

The wooden altar was replaced in 2014 when the current marble altar was installed. On the front of the marble altar is the symbol of a pelican feeding her young, a very special and ancient eucharistic symbol. The marble from both altars came from the same quarry only the new one is from deeper in the mountain.

The new altar contains three first class relics and a second class relic which is a piece of a habit worn by St. Katherine Drexel who founded schools in the Diocese of Nashville. The first class relics are bone fragments of Saints Athanasius the Great, Benignus of Dijon, and Eulalia of Barcelona. The first class relics have been part of various altars in the Cathedral since 1909. The new marble altar was a gift from the people of the Diocese of Nashville.

The tabernacle was returned to the altar of repose in 2021.

The Cathedral of the Incarnation altar adorned for Christmas in 1975.

To all the questions of his persecutors, the Saint invariably replied:

"I am Christian"

He did not lack eloquence, but he knew very well that only by faith and love does one conquer.
